Note. These are screens captured from the working MAARK 2.0 prototype, not indicative wireframes. Layout, spacing, controls and states are the ones now built. Data is illustrative dummy data. The final field set follows the detailed design after the BRD is signed off.

1. Login

Sign in through the Army IAM (SAML 2.0), then complete the IACA token as the second factor. The role selector sets the scope of everything that follows.

2. Dashboard

Command overview: case counts by status, cases by command, the approvals waiting on this user with their waiting time, and the most recently updated cases.

3. Registered Cases

Search, filter and open any case in the user's scope. Columns sort, rows paginate with a rows-per-page control, and each row carries its own quick actions.

6. Approvals

The queue of cases awaiting this user's decision, oldest first, with the waiting time on each. Approving asks for confirmation; sending back asks for a reason, which is written to the case history.

8. Content Management

Maintain site content, settings and the theme. Access is limited to the Super Admin and every change is written to the audit log.

9. Audit Log

Every portal action with the user, role, time and source address. Filter by event group, search across the record, and export. The log is append only.

10. AI Assistant

Ask about policy and permitted case data, on-premise and offline. The rail states the scope the answer is drawn from; the assistant reads only, it cannot act on a case.

11. Design notes

What changed between the first wireframe set and these screens, and why.

Palette	The indicative violet became the service green used across the portal. The emblem stays neutral: no national symbol, no tricolour, no state motto.
Surfaces	Cards are flat with 20px squircle corners and no outline or shadow. Inputs, filters and search share a 16px squircle and one control height per context.
Tables	Overline headers, dashed row dividers, right-aligned tabular numerals, sortable columns, and a footer with rows per page and a record range.
Case registration	The five-step wizard became one form divided by rules. Fewer clicks to file, and the whole case is reviewable before submission.
Approvals	The queue is a sortable table ordered oldest first, with the waiting time on every row and bulk selection. Sending a case back now requires a written reason.
Case detail	The SLA is computed from the filed date against the 180 day limit rather than shown as a fixed figure, and a progress rail states where the case stands.
Controls	Native dropdowns were replaced with a keyboard-navigable component so the list matches the rest of the interface on every machine.
Offline	Nothing is fetched from a network. No content delivery network, no external font, no third-party script, in line with the air-gapped requirement.

Screens captured from the MAARK 2.0 prototype on 7 September 2026 at 1440 pixels wide. Data shown is dummy data created for the demonstration.
